Sporting Clays

Sporting clays is a form of clay pigeon shooting, often described as "golf with a shotgun". With 14 stations our course is laid out over natural terrain. For safety, the course size is often no smaller than 35 acres.

Unlike trap and skeet, which are games of repeatable target presentations, sporting clays simulates the unpredictability of live-quarry shooting with regular course changes offering a great variety of trajectories, angles, speeds, elevations, distances, and target sizes.

Trap

Trap is played by shooting five shots from five stations (25 targets) located from 16 to 27 yards behind a trap house. A trap target is thrown at an unknown angle from the house. Targets are released by a wireless voice activated system.

Skeet

Skeet is played with two machines, one in a low house and one in a high house (the designation of high and low relates to the location of the machine in relation to the ground). The openings of the houses face each other, and the targets are thrown with no side-to-side or up and down variation.
